About Makrana White Marble

Description : Makrana marble is regarded as being the oldest marble in age and the finest quality. Makrana marble is named after a small town in Rajasthan, India where it is mined. Artists have always sought out makrana marble because of its pure white color and its hardness. Makrana marble was made famous for its use as the principle stone in the building of the Taj Mahal. In sculpture the marble is often hand painted in vibrant colors giving a beautiful contrast to the pure white of the marble.

Care: The piece is for indoor use only. Dust the piece as needed using a cotton piece of cloth. Do not use any cleaning solutions on the painted areas.

Payment T&C: 50% in advance and 50% on delivery.

Note:

- Because of being always different in quality or dimensions of marble and stone so we can't fix prices for all items.
- Picture are only for Reference & Items as per availability.
- Transportation bear by Customer for delivery.
- Items also available in white Marble.

Hand Painted Seated Ganesh Marble Statue

Description : A beautiful representation of the remover of obstacles, Lord Ganesh! He is seated on a pink blooming lotus flower with his vehicle, a rat seated by his feet. He holds an axe, noose and a ball of sweets in his hands with his forth hand held up in the abhaya mudra. He is wearing flowing yellow pants and a light shawl that exposes his chest and corpulent belly. The hand painting on this sculpture is beautiful. The floral designs decorating his corkscrew shaped trunk add to the ornate style of the sculpture. The entire sculpture has life in it. Ganesha looks as if he is staring into your soul.

Painted Makrana Marble Ganesh Statue

Description : This beautiful makrana marble Ganesh statue depicts Lord Ganesh standing with 4 arms holding a noose, an axe, his broken tusk that he used to write the Mahabharata epic and a ball of sweets. The statue is not fully painted which shows the beautiful white marble of the statue. In selecting our sculpture Lotus Sculpture looks at the quality of the painting. The most important aspect of the painting is the painting of the eyes. Ganesha's eyes are beautiful and lifelike. They look as if they are going to wink at you any second. Ganesha's vahana, a rat is laying down behind Ganesha's feet holding some food. On either side of Ganesha's neck are two holes so that it is possible to string a necklace of offerings around Ganesha's neck. It is a beautifully carved and exquisitely painted statue of lord Ganesh.

Standing White Marble Shiva Statue

Description : This exquisitely hand painted Shiva is a stunning work from our Rajasthani artisans. Shiva is standing wearing a tiger skin with one hand raised in the abhaya mudra. The hooded head of the cobra belt Shiva is wearing rests on top of the head of the tiger. The contrast of the green of the cobra and brown spots of the tiger head look great together. In Shiva's other hands he holds a water vessel, a drum and a trident with a snake on it. The painting on this sculpture is heavenly. All aspects of Shiva are perfectly painted from the cobra nestled around his neck, the string of Rudraksha beads around his neck to the the fountain of water pouring from the tiny figure of the goddess Ganga on Shiva's head. His halo is painted to mirror the rays of the sun. Shiva's face is pure and beautiful. He has a slight smile on the corners of his mouth. His eyes capture a look of compassion and love. A wonderful representation of Lord Shiva!

Standing White Marble Shiva Statue

Description : The muscular form of Shiva is calmly mediating on a tiger skin. Both his arms are resting in his lap in the dhayna mudra. He wears only a loin cloth with a necklace of rudraksha beads and snake coiled around his broad chest. The snake symbolizes the power Shiva has over the most deadly of creatures. Snakes are also used to symbolize the Hindu dogma of reincarnation. Their natural process of molting or shedding their skin is symbolic of the human souls transmigration of bodies from one life to another.

His long hair is tucked up on a bun on top of his head and continues to flow down his back. There is a crescent moon tucked into it. He holds a dhamru or drum and a trident in his other two hands. The stone is pure white in color without any blemishes. The piece is carved from one piece of white marble.

White Marble Earth Touching Buddha

Description: The Buddha sits peacefully on a double lotus base in the Bhumisparsha Mudra. Literally Bhumisparsha translates into 'touching the earth'. It is more commonly known as the 'earth witness' mudra. This mudra, formed with all five fingers of the right hand extended to touch the ground, symbolizes the Buddha's enlightenment under the bodhi tree, when he summoned the earth goddess, Sthavara, to bear witness to his attainment of enlightenment. The right hand, placed upon the right knee in earth-pressing mudra, and complemented by the left hand-which is held flat in the lap in the dhyana mudra of meditation, symbolizes the union of method and wisdom, samasara and nirvana, and also the realizations of the conventional and ultimate truths. It is in this posture that Shakyamuni overcame the obstructions of Mara while meditating on Truth.

Shiva Lingam in Black & White Marble

Description: This Shiva Lingam is north Indian in style. It is carved from black marble which shows some of the natural gray veins of the stone. The Lingam has four cobras on it. One under the spout, another on top of the spout, another circling the Lingam and the final cobra on the backside of the Lingam. The yoni has a nice design. The yoni design is unique in shape and differs from the south India style of Lingam. The yoni is angled to capture any liquids poured over the Lingam during abhishekam.
